Dr. G. Indira is a distinguished educator, academic leader, and researcher with over two decades of rich experience in teacher education and academic development. She currently serves as a Professor at the Andhra Mahila Sabha College of Teacher Education, Hyderabad. She has also served as the Principal of Andhra Mahila Sabha College of Teacher Education, demonstrating exemplary leadership in academic administration and institutional development. At present, she holds the role of Academic Coordinator, where she actively contributes to academic planning, coordination, and quality enhancement initiatives. Through her multifaceted roles, she continues to play a pivotal part in shaping future educators and strengthening institutional excellence.

With an extensive academic background, Dr. Indira holds a Ph.D. in Education from Dr. B.R. Ambedkar Open University, along with an M.Phil. and M.Sc. in Psychology, an M.Ed., and a Master's degree in Sociology. She also possesses a Postgraduate Diploma in Guidance and Counselling, reflecting her strong foundation in both educational theory and psychological practice. Her multidisciplinary expertise enables her to integrate cognitive, social, and emotional dimensions into her teaching and mentoring approach.

Dr. Indira's teaching career spans diverse roles across schools and teacher education institutions. She began her professional journey as a Secondary Grade Teacher and later served as a Lecturer in reputed colleges of education before progressing to senior academic roles. With extensive experience in postgraduate teaching, she has developed expertise in guiding M.Ed. students and fostering research-oriented learning environments.

A committed academic guide, Dr. Indira has supervised over 300 M.Ed. dissertations across regular and distance modes, demonstrating her dedication to nurturing research skills among aspiring educators. Her scholarly contributions include presenting research papers at national and state-level seminars on key themes such as teacher education, women's empowerment, and vocational education reforms.

In addition to her teaching and research roles, Dr. Indira has made significant contributions to academic content development. She has co-authored textbooks in Psychology and Ethics & Values for the Telugu Academy and has served as a resource person for audio and video lessons for Dr. B.R. Ambedkar Open University.

An active participant in professional development, she has engaged in numerous workshops, seminars, and faculty development programs organized by leading institutions such as NIEPA, Osmania University and EFLU. She is also a life member of the Hyderabad Psychological Association and contributes to institutional quality initiatives as a member of the Internal Quality Assurance Cell (IQAC) and Guidance and Counselling Cell.

With a strong commitment to educational excellence, Dr. G. Indira continues to foster a progressive and learner-centered academic environment. Her work reflects a dedication to nurturing competent educators, promoting research culture, and advancing holistic development in teacher education.
